

Quality, Health, Safety & Environmental Protection Policy

McKeil Marine Limited has developed the Quality and Safety Management System and structured the organization in such a manner as to provide the best customer service possible, under the safest working conditions. Management is committed:

- To provide a healthy and safe work place;
- To preserve the environment in which it operates;
- To continually exceed customer expectations and;
- To continuously improve the Quality and Safety Management System.

McKeil Marine Limited, through its commitment to this policy:

- Shall communicate the contents of this policy with all employees and ensure they recognize the importance and significance of their contribution to achieving the Company's Quality, Health, Safety and Environmental protection objectives;
- Requires all employees, practice risk management in their work. This includes following the systems designed to identify hazards and reduce risks to People, the Environment, Equipment and Customer Property;
- Shall comply with all applicable legislation and participate in industry and government initiatives that promote Quality, Safety, Health and Environmental protection;
- Is committed to providing resources for implementing this Policy, including training, inspections, investigations and task analysis to facilitate continual improvement;
- Requires that all contractors servicing its vessels and facilities comply with established government and company rules and regulations.

Active support and participation of all will ensure that our standards are maintained and our objectives are met.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'S. Bravener', written over a horizontal line.

Scott Bravener
President
McKeil Marine Limited

Reviewed: July 27, 2020